

Independence Day

You swallow your voice over and again
as if packing fireworks with explosives.

Fragile storage, overwhelming stockage
when all the words blast out.

Red, white, and blue riots of expression
lodge metallic in your nostrils.

Your breath in boils your blood,
the sound booming, bathes your heart.

Your lips part
in awe.